THE SWISS BUDGET FOR 1875.
The Committee of the Swiss Confederation for next year, the deficit, some weeks ago estimated at 1,000,000, has been reduced to a little over 1,000,000. This has been accomplished by determining to dispense with the military instruction in special and other cases to a large extent during next year. This has enabled the Council to estimate the military expenditure at 3,500,000.—a sum which will have to be supplied by a contribution of two millions of francs, in order to complete the scheme of military organization. It is proposed that the deficiency in the budget shall be met by indirect taxes.

MARRIAGE AT THE DIAMOND Diggings.

Social arrangements are already in a somewhat unsatisfactory condition at the Diamond Diggings; at any rate the Diamond Field relates a history which forcibly illustrates the difficulties that beset those who enter upon the holy estate of matrimony. A white had decided upon making a coloured lady his bride, she was upon the point of marriage, and the arrangements were final. A great travelling feast was accordingly prepared, with a huge cake and plenty of wine. At the instigation of the lady, six carriages full of her friends were invited to be present, and when the happy morning arrived all repaired to the camp altar, and the pair were solemnly united. Sad to relate, the result was not very satisfactory, and the start of remaining with the bridegroom, her sole object being to provide a robust feast for her acquaintances and then escape. As a consequence, her friends drank up the liquors, devoured the cake, carried off the bride, and then, thrashed her husband, who, we infer, was somewhat astonished by the turn things had taken. The young wife, it is true, had said that "she" had caused much excitement, and it goes on to wish that "those who broke up the little domestic arrangements will have no better fortune themselves when they try to set up domestic fixings on their own account." Retribution is doubtless a very salutary thing, but one may easily imagine what would be the result if the wife had been to be legally married to the man. As the finding of diamonds at the Camp is attended with such discomfort, the gentlemen who stay at home and search for black diamonds, even though they do run the risk of being blown up, are comparatively well off.

A FOUNDLING'S GRATITUDE.

So many anxious parents nowadays solve the difficult problem of "how to provide for their children" by the simple expedient of depositing their offspring in the gutter a few hours after birth, that any little incident relating to the after-care of foundlings can hardly fail to be read with interest in domestic circles. At a meeting of the Middle and Old Town Guardians recently the attention of the Board was directed to a magnificient display of works of art on a table in the board-room, consisting of two miniature cabinets, beautifully carved boxes, fans, cigar cases, and other articles of Oriental manufacture, the whole exhibition producing a most dazzling and attractive effect. A large proportion of the articles were devoted to the sale of dry goods, connected with the blessings of local self-government. The master of the workhouse, being called upon for an explanation, related to the guardians the following story.—In the year 1856 a boy about six days old was picked up in a street just outside the workhouse, and was brought into the care of the Board, who were unable to ascertain his parents. He was brought into the workhouse, and joined the band of one of her Majesty's regiments. Last year the baby went out to India with its regiment, and, carrying with it a grateful remembrance of the master's kindness, despatched from this country to the workhouse at Mile-end the articles which had excited the admiration of the guardians as a present to the master, desiring all sorts of congratulations, and the blessing of our Lord. The guardians were much pleased at this remarkable instance of a foundling's gratitude; and it is well worth the consideration of his parents whether, if they are still alive, they might not now with out only safety, but advantage give way to their natural instincts and open their arms to this warm-hearted youth.—Full Mail Gazette.

A CURIOUS LAW CASE.

In the year 1869, M. Joseph Guibord, a French Canadian and a Roman Catholic, died at Montreal, and his widow should be in terred in the Catholic cemetery. This, however, was refused by the Ursulines of Montreal, on the ground that M. Guibord was, when he died, under the ban of the Church, in consequence of his having been a member of some literary Institute in which books were read of a nature displeasing to the ecclesiastical authorities.

It is difficult to understand what is precisely meant by the banning to which M. Joseph Guibord was subjected. That his corpse, however, was banished from the Catholic cemetery is certain; it was "temporally deposited" in the Protestant burial-ground, and then laid low to meet with the curse of the Cross.

The Priests of Lower Canada issued a circular, in which they directed that the laws of Canada with reference to the Roman Catholic Church, and deciding that, as M. Guibord had been a member, succeeded as parties to the suit, which ultimately came on for appeal before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. For many months it was remained, sub judice; but on Saturday Sir Robert Peel, the Home Secretary, issued a circular, in which he directed that the Priests of Lower Canada should issue for the burial of M. Guibord as originally claimed on his behalf. The Curse of Montreal is likewise cast in case; and, as appeals to the Privy Council are somewhat expensive, it may not be altogether pleasing to the Roman Catholic hierarchy of Lower Canada.

Montreal is, however, extremely wealthy, and the law of the land is that the rich should be buried in the most sumptuous manner. The poor, however, are not so fortunate, and the poor of Montreal, who have no relatives, and no friends, and no money, are compelled to be buried in the paupers' cemetery.

M. Guibord's widow should be in the paupers' cemetery, and the poor of Montreal, who have no relatives, and no friends, and no money, are compelled to be buried in the paupers' cemetery.
